The journal retracts the 18 July 2017 article cited above. Following article publication, the corresponding author reported that the data upon which the study was based were not collected at the Zhongnan Hospital, Wuhan, China, as stated in the article. Moreover, the data have been previously published. As this represents a serious breach of our guidelines and publication ethics, the article must be retracted.

This retraction was approved by the Field Chief Editor and the Specialty Chief Editor of Frontiers in Physiology.
